Travel back in time by staying at a traditional Japanese home

The 130 year-old building, constructed in the Japanese traditional architecture, Irimoya-zukuri, has a wooden hall with a hearth, thick black ceiling pillars, a Kamidana (miniature household Shinto altar) and an old wall clock. It is as though you have traveled into the past. You can experience staying at an old thatched-roof house while tasting the local specialty-torisuki (chicken sukiyaki).
