A big ginkgo tree welcomes you

The first farmhouse inn in Kochi prefecture. As the name of the guest house suggests, a large ginkgo tree welcomes you. The rural landscape where this inn resides, there is an atmosphere that makes you want to take a walk as soon as you arrive. There are old warehouses and fields where you can get vegetables for the table. In the winter, you can spend time with a heated kotatsu table, fishing in a nearby river among other activities as if you were returning to your parents' place in the countryside. For dinner, guests surround the irori hearth and home-made dishes are served centering on vegetables taken from the private field. Guests had lots of laughs and good fun and the owners join in and everyone forgets the passage of time.

Activities (Extra fee)

At Farm Stay Inn Icho no Ki you can experience farming, picking edible wild plants, making konjac, etc., but just staying and enjoy the life of a farmer is an experience in itself. In addition, there is a bridge called "Miyukibashi" that spans the approach to Mishima Shrine, and the upper part is a rare, covered bridge that uses a lot of materials from Yusuhara Town. Also, the mountain road that extends to the left from the inn is designated as the road for Ryoma Sakamoto.

Message from Tomoko Ueda, the "mother" of the guest house

Please enjoy the deliciousness of fresh local and home grown vegetables. Through activities which are focuses on revitalizing the agriculture and forestry industry, we hope that our family will be able to think about the ideal life for the region. And at the same time, live a happy and healthy life.
