Nostalgic for adults, new for children That's Omichidani no Sato

This inn is a renovated 95-year-old folk house that is limited to one group per day. A house with a hard-packed dirt floor is a place where you can feel nostalgia and relax. You can enjoy the old-fashioned farmer's life or enjoy the freshly picked homegrown vegetables and edible foraged wild plants. You can also take part in rural activities such as kiwi picking and bamboo shoot digging. The inn is in a bit inconvenient location, but the area is a nice mountain village where you can fully enjoy nature. One of the pleasures is to spend a relaxing time while reading in the room on the second floor.

Activity Menu for each season (Extra fees applicable)

There are seasonal activities seasonal such as taking care of and harvesting fruit and vegetables and making konjac. You can fully enjoy the natural surroundings of the Yame, Tachibana area.

Hospitality using local mountain products

You can feel each season in every meal. Bamboo shoots and edible wild plants in spring, okra and eggplant in summer, bitter melon, and imo manju (potato dumplings) and "dago dumpling soup" from the Chikugo region are served. The soy sauce-pickled garlic grown at Omichidani no Sato is perfect with rice. Umeboshi (pickled plums) which is carefully made from hand-picked plums, are also popular. The owner's wife displays her cooking skills by giving you an amazing meal.
